

Greetings from my comfy, dry, scorpion free couch.

I planned on issuing the final installment of BTSR 2008 from camp last night; however things did not go quite as planned....

The last full day of camp at BTSR started out quite well.

The weather was gorgeous, and some of the boys elected to sleep under the stars the night before. The morning was cool and it felt great to sleep in.

They look so angelic while sleeping. I have heard that is so their parents don't kill them in their sleep (that was a joke). I suspect however, this becomes more important as they transition further into their teenage years.

The creek was still high in the morning. This picture is for you Mr. Perry. Mr. Hahn snapped it in your honor.

In the morning some boys did some light repelling.

Ok, so maybe not so light!

Late morning was filled with some free time.

Afternoon at the BTSR spa and resort included some tanning time for the rich and famous.

Some of the more mature people took a trail ride.

